

Cerebral cortex: The cerebral cortex is the external layer of the brain consisting of grey matter. It controls many basic and advanced functions, from those related to the five senses through movement to decision making.

