

K complexes: Wave patterns on an EEG characterized by a brief high negative voltage peak followed by a positive deflection. These waves usually occur in response to external stimuli (sounds, touches of the skin, breathing interruptions).