

Sleep spindles: Bursts of brain activity visible on an EEG during Stage 2 sleep, they often follow K complexes. It may represent periods where the brain is inhibiting processing to keep the sleeper in a quiet state.