

Cross-sectional and longitudinal studies: Cross-sectional and longitudinal study designs differ in their methodology although both are observational ones. The first one mostly observe their subjects at one point of time, while the other one can conduct repeated observations of the same of individual subjects over a longer period of time.