

Cortisol: Often called the stress hormone, this glucocorticoid is secreted by a part of the adrenal glands. Produced when the body is under stress, cortisol modifies various parameters (blood sugar levels, blood pressure, etc.), which enables the body to react to the situation (fight or flight).