

Hypothalamus: Brain structure that serves as the link between the nervous system and hormonal system. It allows the body to maintain a proper balance for functioning, particularly in response to stress, by producing various hormones (such as CRH), which then stimulate different glands (such as the pituitary gland).

