

Pituitary gland: Gland that produces the hormones that manage a wide range of body functions, including response to stress. It is connected to the hypothalamus and is located in a small bony cavity at the base of the brain.

